

Carlos Malavé Marin

Venezuelan musician based in Granada since 2017, Carlos Malavé is currently a choir conductor and guitar teacher at various associations and music schools in the region. He began his musical training in 1995 as a guitarist with the “Estudiantina de la Universidad de Oriente”, under the direction of conductor Luis Hernández. In 1999, he pursued studies in music theory, counterpoint, harmony, ear training, piano, and classical guitar at the “Conservatorio de Música Simón Bolívar”. In 2002, in pursuit of professional development, he joined the Chair of Music Education at the Instituto Universitario de Estudios Musicales. With more than 30 years of academic training and professional experience, he has participated in numerous festivals, recording projects, and national and international choral competitions, earning widespread critical acclaim for his work.